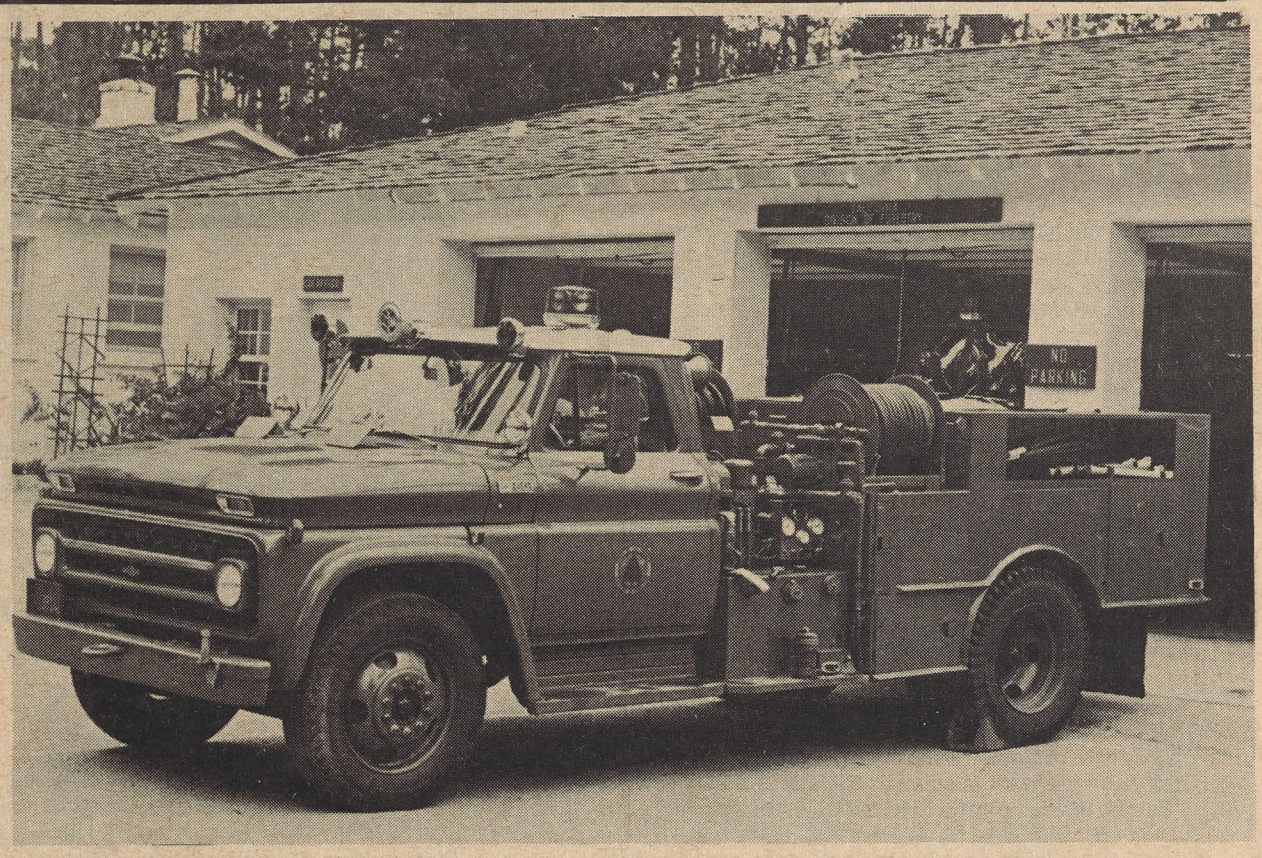
Controversy over fire protection



THIS FIRE ENGINE, a 400-gallon-per-minute pumper, responds to fire calls in the unincorporated areas of Monterey County, including most of Carmel Valley to a line east of Rancho Fiesta Road. During the winter months this is the only truck on duty to cover these areas, usually with a one-man crew. During the fire season, which started on May 1 this year, there is a second truck similar to this on duty at the Carmel Hill station, as well as a truck at the Tularcitos substation east of Carmel Valley Village. By the end of this month, each station will have four additional firemen hired for the season from the ranks of college students looking for summer jobs and the hard-core unemployed.

STATE FORESTRY SERVICE Fire Captain Don Tiller, left, and Roy Meadows chat outside the State Division of Forestry fire station on Carmel Hill. Tiller's area of responsibility includes all the unincorporated areas of Monterey County, reaching from Big Sur on the south to east of Rancho Fiesta Road in Carmel Valley to Marina on the north.

THIS 1000-GALLON-PER-MINUTE PUMP TRUCK stands ready 24 hours a day to answer fire calls from County Service Area 42, which is Pebble Beach, or County Service Area 43, which includes Del Mesa Carmel, Hacienda Carmel, the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, Rancho Rio Vista and several other residential areas surrounding Carmel proper. Property owners in these areas pay for the truck and its crew, and by law it may not respond to any calls for assistance from neighboring fire districts -- not even from the State Forestry Service fire station at Carmel Hill, where it is stationed.

TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sirs:

The theatre wishes to express its gratitude for the part you played in making our rummage sale last Saturday such a success.

Not only were we able to attain our goal of disposing of items no longer useful to us, raising more money than we had anticipated, but all involved felt we had had a rewarding experience.

On the basis of this year's success, we are hoping to make the rummage sale an annual event.

Dear Editor:

Webster's dictionary defends handicap as: "A contest in which advantages are given to some contestants and disadvantages imposed on others in order to equalize their chances of winning; also, the advantage given or the disadvantage imposed." "Any disadvantage which makes success more difficult."

The handicapped of Monterey County are not asking for success. They want simply a chance to be useful and have a meaningful existence in our society. They don't want to be a tax burden on taxpayers; just taxpayers rather than taxusers.

The California State Department of Rehabilitation has offered this county a grant on a four-to-one matching basis, which will enable us as citizens of Monterey County to help the handicapped to help themselves.

This is all they (the handicapped) are asking, just an equal chance to compete in our society.

Is this asking too much??

If matching monies can be raised by the 15th of June, a rehabilitation facility will open its door to the handicapped of our county here in Salinas. This facility will operate on a subcontract basis. Several businesses in Salinas and Monterey have already offered contracts if and when the rehabilitation facility is operable.

Several individuals are giving their free time to help establish the Salinas Valley Workshop Inc. They need help!

Every dollar donated is five dollars toward establishment of a rehabilitation facility.

The handicapped will—and want to—work if they are given the chance.

Please let the handicapped know how you feel by contacting the Salinas Valley Workshop, P.O. Box 86, Salinas. Ph. 758-0569.

Don't let this opportunity pass by us.

School board finally agrees on calendar

Scratch those plans for a long, looooong Labor Day Weekend trip in September, the trip that was going to run all the way through Admission Day on September 9.

After a somewhat greater than usual hassle, the Carmel School board adopted the 1970-71 school calendar last week, and it looks like this:

Tuesday, September 1 -- teachers report for work.
Wednesday, September 2 -- First Day of School.
Monday, September 7 -- Labor Day holiday.
Tuesday, September 8 -- Regular school day.
Wednesday, September 9 -- Admission Day holiday.

After this in-again, out-again beginning, things settle down to a familiar routine. The last day of school is June 11, providing 180 teaching days for the school year.

NEUTRALITY

This civilization has got me confused, or else
I'm old-fashioned and can't understand it;
I'll not interfere so as not to get bruised for throwing a brick at a modern-day bandit.

Like college-boy thinking does nothing for me, it's true I'm retired and get paid for not working but how armed invasion can set people free or students get credit for courses they're shirking?

Farmers get paid for not raising a crop, and printers get paid for what never gets printed; unions openly claim a closed shop, and guaranteed wages for all has been hinted.

Because they're on strike and have closed down the schools, some school teachers want to get paid for not teaching; the youngsters rate big not obeying the rules, and parents are warned to go slow on the preaching.

Now what will become of the world I don't know, so I just pay my taxes and crawl in my shell, and trust that the powers will on me bestow
a respectable bonus for not raising hell!

BOB WOOD REPORTS. . .

A REGULAR COLUMN BY BOB WOOD,
ASSEMBLYMAN - 34TH DISTRICT

Many of you may have read in your local paper where Patrick McGee (R), 52, an Assemblyman from Los Angeles county, passed away (cancer) in the UC hospital in San Francisco. If you will recall it is just a little over a year ago that Assemblyman Pattee was killed in an automobile accident. Dame Fortune has played a peculiar role in California politics since that time. I understand the Republican party only had something like 18 members of the 80-man Assembly in the year 1960 or there about. Through the following ten-year period they built up that figure to where starting the year 1969 they actually had a majority of 41 members.

When the Legislature begins in January, the first two months are usually used in introducing bills and the voting does not really become serious until March or April. Assemblyman Pattee was killed about this time and the Republicans lost their majority. Although I happened to be the one to replace Assemblyman Pattee those last few weeks of the '69 session, another sequence of events found Assemblyman Mulford (R) of Alameda, absent from the legislative battles due to a cataract eye operation, and thus again the Republican party did not really have the 41 votes necessary for passage of a bi-partisan bill.

There were a few instances during the remainder of the '69 session when this was brought about however, one of these being the passage of the budget in which Assemblyman Mulford was brought up from an Oakland hospital just to cast a vote, but then had to return to the hospital. Everyone thought the 1970 session would surely show the Republican majority of 41 votes and during the first few months 41 Republican members were present.

However, Assemblyman McGee was taken to the hospital in late March just about the time thevoting began and at that time we thought he might be able to return, but soon he found the days extending into weeks and the weeks into months, and Friday, we learned that Patrick McGee would never again take his seat in the California Legislature. Fortune had again dealt the Republican party a hard blow, for again they do not have the 41 votes necessary in a bi-partisan bill and it is doubtful, although it is possible, a special election could bring about the election of another candidate before the close of the present session. The present count of 40 Republicans and 39 Democrats simply means that neither party actually has enough votes to put over a bi-partisan bill. Any man who introduces a bill must make sure that it has the support of at least some members of the opposing party.

Between now and 1971 there will be a whole complete general election and no one knows what the new lineups will bring one way or the other. But past events have shown how death and injury and disease have played a big part in the role of California politics. History has shown us that these same factors have also played a large role in national politics and the destiny of our country. Enuf for now...

Elementary schools may have new boundaries

Supt. of Schools Harris Taylor last week warned the school board that it may be necessary to alter the attendance boundaries for Carmelo, River and Woods schools in order to equalize class loads.

While emphasizing that the administration has come to no firm decision yet, Taylor said the time may come when students living in one geographic area will need to be transfered, in a block from one school to another.

He said the district will probably also need to eliminate classes that enroll only four or six students at the high school.

Taylor told the board that in order to avoid hiring additional teachers, and thus spending more money, it is necessary to avoid the undersized classes which have traditionally been a part of the district's organizational pattern.

He said many classes fall below the accepted ratio of one teacher to 25 students. At the elementary level, he explained, if there are undersized classes at the same grade level at two schools, the district is paying an average of $9000 more than necessary for the salary of the "extra" teacher.

"The Board and public should be made aware of the problems which arise in a small school district with widely separated schools when an attempt is made to equalize class loads," he stated.

Taylor also reported to the board he had recently received word from Sacramento that it is very unlikely that the State will be able to enforce financial penalties against school districts which fail to establish 180-minute single session kindergartens by September 1971.

At its March 25 meeting, the board had decided to go along with the new law and hire two additional teachers for the longer kindergarten sessions. This would cost the district approximately $20,000 in salaries, but without the change, the district was liable to a $14,000 fine from the State.

Upon learning that there is little, if any, likelihood of the State actually levying such a fine, the board voted to rescind its earlier action and continue with its present double kindergarten sessions.

Board members indicated they would study the matter further if new legislation is passed making the threat of a financial penalty more imminent.

New Carmel Community Youth Counselor ...

John Frykman selected by Carmel School Board

The Carmel school district has hired a nationally-known expert in the field of drug abuse and youth counseling to fill the newly-created role of community youth counselor.

He is John Frykman, an ordained minister and director of the Drug Treatment Center at the Haight-Ashbury Medical Clinic in San Francisco.

In recommending Frykman to the board of education last week, Supt. of Schools Harris Taylor commented: "I've met with him at length, and I feel he is the best qualified individual that this community or any community could find in this area (of drug abuse) ...

"He has breadth and wide experience ... He understands the detoxification process. He understands the pharmacological problems ... He has the kind of personality I feel our young people can relate to."

Frykman, who will take a calary cut to $13,000 to start working for the Carmel school district July 1, had met individually with some board members and the board's Drug Misuse Committee before he was officially offered the job last week.

He had explained to them that he looked forward to becoming involved in a smaller community, where he would be able to deal with individual problems and be in a position to help develop a local community program.

A graduate of the University of Massachusetts, Frykman has taken additional courses in sociology and philosophy at the University of Kansas, and received a certificate of architecture from Wentworth Technical Institute in Boston.

BROAD EXPERIENCE

He was trained in pharmacology at the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco and received a divinity degree with a specialty in urban problems from the Philadelphia Lutheran Theological Seminary.

In addition, Frykman has had specialized training in clinical counseling and group therapy at the Army Chaplain School in New York and served as an Army chaplain in Korea and for a National Guard Unit in Oakland.

He has also been pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church in Oakland and associate pastor of the First Lutheran Church in Sacramento.

The great challenge facing Frykman as he comes to Carmel is evident from this official job description for community youth counselor:

"One. The Community Counselor will serve as the major consultant to the professional staff of the school district on problems of drug education. In this capacity, he will review the District's existing educational programs, examine all new programs as they are developed and made available for school use, recommend programs, and assist professional staff in the implementation of programs.

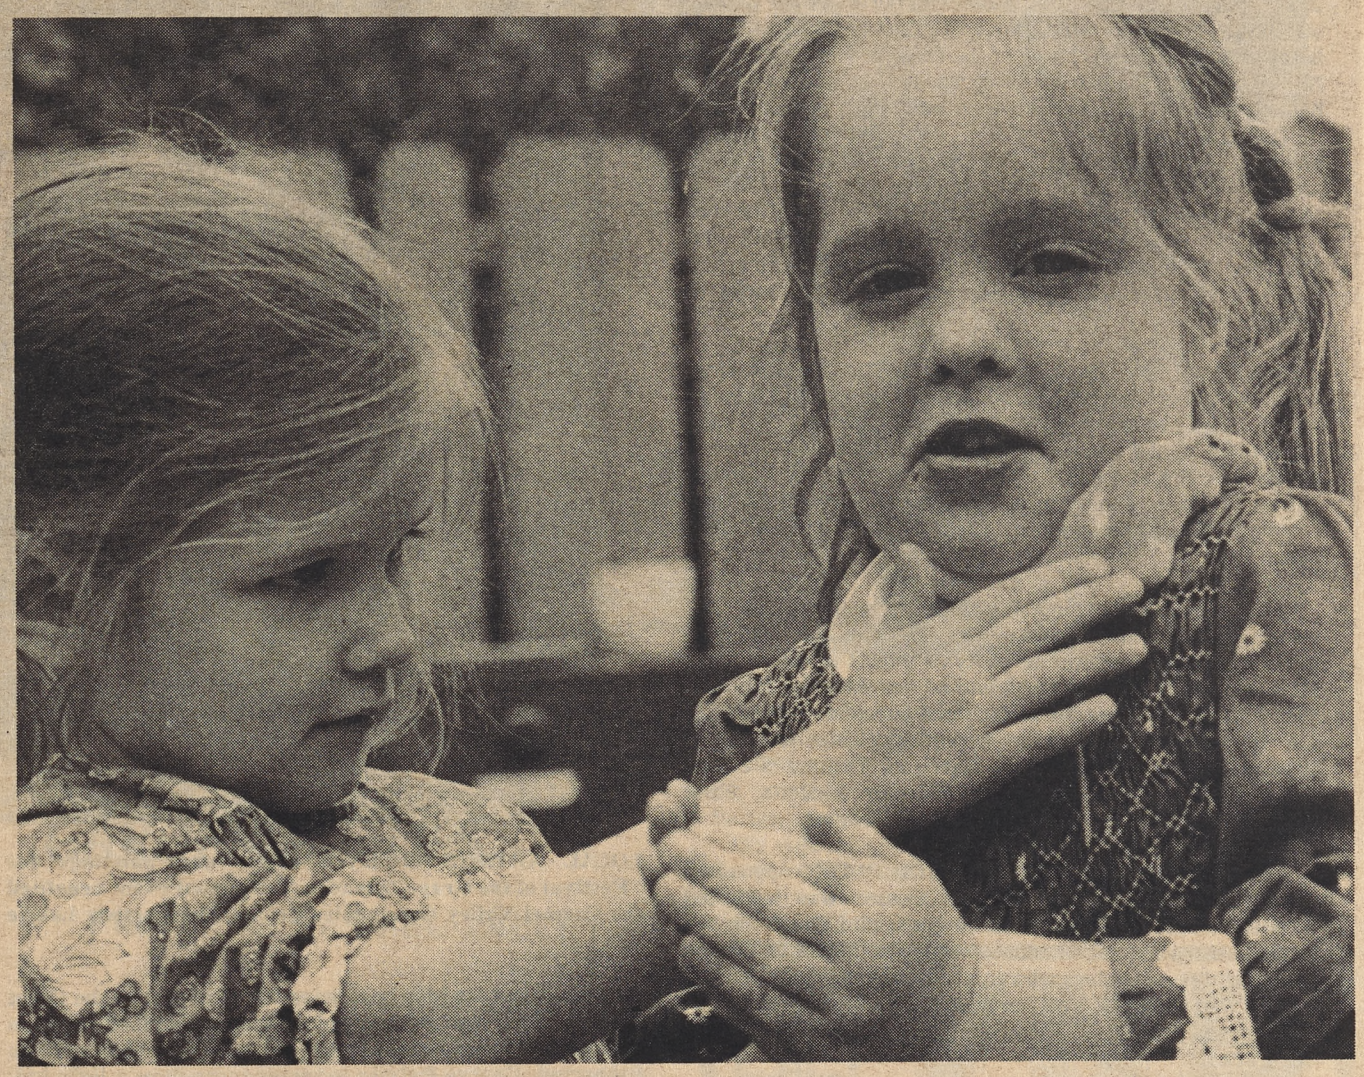
"Two. He will serve as the major agent to enlist understanding and support of the community in combating drug misuse problems. In this capacity he will work with City and County mental health, medical, and legal agencies. He will attempt to secure Federal, State, County, and local funds to assist in the solution of the problem. He will actively communicate with interested groups in the community with regard to the drug misuse problem and enlist their aid in the establishment of assistance through the school and community.

"Three. Most importantly, he will devote a major portion of his time working with the young of the community on problems of drug misuse. In this capacity he will counsel with young people in a community setting. His actions will focus on young people residing in the community, not young people in transit. His counselees will not necessarily be restricted to students enrolled in school since many drug users have dropped from school or have recently graduated from secondary school. The Community Counselor will work with parents in dealing with family problems in which drug misuse is involved. He will also work with agencies responsible for medical and psychological therapy, and assist in making available medical and psychological services to which he can refer young people involved with drug misuse.

"Four. He will maintain a sound, professional relationship with law enforcement agencies and the Probation Department in order to attack drug problems with a maximum of cooperation and a minimum of confusion.

"The Community Youth Counselor must possess a first hand knowledge of drugs and their misuse. However, he should not be a former drug addict. Previous experience related to the demands of this position will be of utmost importance. A mutually agreeable work schedule shall be developed which must include some evening and weekend responsibilities.

It is suggested that the counselor be placed on the classified salary schedule at a salary not to exceed $13,000.00 per annum for a typical twelve month contract."



OOPS ... Christina Griffith didn't mind holding her brother's mouse, Bobby, in her hands, but when he suddenly scampered onto her shoulder, she reacted with feminine alarm. Fortunately her friend, Kysa Connett, kept cool. This happened last week at the Montessori Children's School where children were getting an advance look at some of the pets that will be entered in the Pet and Hobby Show at the Pebble Beach Polo Field on Saturday. Any child 3 to 16 may enter a pet or hobby by obtaining an entry blank in advance from the Friends of Montessori, 624-7052. There will also be pony rides, a cookie decorating contest and food for sale. Proceeds will benefit the Montessori School in Carmel.

MRS. SHUFORD PEELER of Charlotte, N.C., flew to the Valley for a week's visit with her brother, Sterling Mummert of Holman Road. "You may say," said Sterling, "that her illustrious brother revived his enthusiasm for this area because his guest found everything so agreeable!" He escorted her on what he calls, "the scenic-serge route" of Monterey, Pacific Grove, Pebble Beach, Carmel and Point Lobos. Another day they traveled the Old Coast Trail to Big Sur where Mrs. Peeler, long an enthusiast of bridges, had an unsurpassed view of Bixby Bridge. Sterling, who had sent her pictures years ago of both Bixby and Golden Gate Bridges, was also able to show her first hand the Golden Gate span on their trip to Grass Valley to visit a brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey F. Mummert. It was a reunion after 40 years for Mrs. Peeler and this brother who with his wife have visited the Valley many times. Enroute home they visited friends in Placerville and Sterling was able to point out various Soil Conservation projects in which he had been involved. The southern visitor left with many good impressions of our attractive shopping centers, the cleanliness of our highways and the variety of wild birds in the Valley. Both she and her husband are expert bird watchers and have taken many trips to Trinidad in quest of their feathered friends. The Peelers plan to return to California on a retirement trip.

The team was representative of the Peninsula Gymnastics Club whose purpose is to promote competitive level gymnastics. It is sponsored by the Recreation departments of the CUSD and MPUSD. Classes are held two nights a week at Monterey Peninsula College where college equipment and some borrowed from CUSD is utilized. All of the instruction is volunteer and financial support is mainly from members' dues. The club has expressed a need for large pieces of equipment which the schools' budgets do not include. GARDENING TIPS

... FROM THE CARMEL VALLEY GARDEN ASSN.

June is the month to start preparing your garden for next spring's flowers. This is especially true of Rhododendrons, Azaleas and Camellias. By now most have bloomed and started new growth.

Remove all spent blossoms. Do not compost blossoms as diseases, if any, might be carried over. Never allow these shrubs to completely dry out, but do not saturate with water as this tends to replace the air in the soil thus shutting off the supply of oxygen so essential to the survival of the plant. Lack of oxygen will cause the leaves to yellow and in some cases, drop off.

Camellias and Azaleas especially are surface feeders and should never be cultivated more than one-half inch deep. They should have a light mulch of peat moss to protect them during the hot summer months and should be damp at all times. Foliage should be washed free of dust as they also breathe through the leaves.

There are more than 700 species and varieties of Rhododendron, some more hardy than others. Consult your nurseryman or garden supply house for the proper fertilizers and do read the complete label before using.

If properly cared for, next spring you will have flowers that you will be proud to show your friends.

Roses also need considerable care during the summer. The best method of watering is to dig a basin about 18 inches from the base of the plant and fill with water. One good, deep watering not only saves time, but is far more beneficial than many light waterings.

If you have gardening problems, come to our meetings. We'll try to find the answer, and in that way, we will all learn.

Goepfert, program director for the Monterey Bay Area Council, BoyScouts of America, will join the staff of the Transatlantic Boy Scout Council with headquarters in Heidelberg, Germany, beginning July 15, announced Scout Executive Frank Buck. He will serve the district of Weisbaden, Germany.

Goepfert retired a lieutenant colonel in the United States Air Force in 1966 and joined the local Scout staff and was assigned as Peninsula District Scout Executive. In 1969 he was appointed program director. He has also been serving as council camp director.

He is a native of Buffalo, New York, and was a Boy Scout. As an adult Scouter he was a commissioner, completed Wood Badge, camping and district administration courses.

His wife Ann will accompany him to Germany. His son Douglas will continue his studies at the University of California at Santa Cruz and daughter Gail will attend the California Lutheran College at Thousand Oaks, California.

Tularcitos program for next year

Teacher aides to continue, 'Choice' classes out

Tularcitos School will continue using teacher aides next year, but will probably drop its once-a-week "choice" class.

Principal George Gustafson reported on both innovative programs at last week's school board meeting.

He said the Tularcitos staff was pleased with the decision to hire several aides, rather than two additional certified teachers, last year. Aides worked at all grade levels and performed a variety of jobs, from taking attendance records and running off dittos to assisting with small group work, tutoring individual students and supervising playground activities.

Gustafson said the aides varied in background from high school graduates to one with a teaching credential, and that they were individually matched with teachers and anticipated work assignments. They are paid an average of $2 an hour for no more than 25 hours a week.

Gustafson strongly recommended that the teaching staff be allowed to decide each year if it wants to continue using the aides.

In discussing "choice" or "STEP" (student elective program), Gustafson said that while it had been a worthwhile and generally successful experiment, there would not be time in next year's program to continue it.

The STEP program allowed children in the fourth through sixth grades to spend one 70-minute period a week with a teacher of their choice.

As initially conceived, STEP was to fill four functions: provide time for remedial instruction, provide time for in-depth instruction in an academic area, give teachers in other academic areas information about the academic performance of youngsters, and develop depth communication between students and teachers.

As it worked in practice, Gustafson said, almost all time was spent in opening communication, and very little time was spent on in-depth academic instruction or remedial instruction.

He listed a wide range of activities that took place during the STEP period, ranging from general discussion, manufacturing electric learning boards or planning a cookout to chess and math games, painting and drama.

Field trips included a nature walk at Pt. Lobos, a horseback ride, a bike ride, and visits to Marzi's Pottery Shop and Chupinos ranch.

Gustafson said that no more than 15 parents had expressed concern about the program by the time of the second report period, and said that he and the teaching staff felt it was a learning experience well worth 4 percent of the student's time.

OPPOSING VIEWPOINTS

A sharply differing viewpoint was expressed by four members of the audience.

Robert Oross of Via Contenta gave school board members a copy of a questionnaire about STEP that he had mailed to all teachers participating in the program. He said that his only reply was from an anonymous teacher who said that many teachers objected to the class but were afraid to say so "for fear of retribution."

His statement was met by a chorus of disbelief from the six or seven Tularcitos teachers who were present.

Mrs. Oross told board members she had observed the "choice" classes several times, and had seen the children walking in and out of rooms without permission. She said there was a general lack of discipline.

She also questioned the value of taking children on hikes and horseback riding, and said that during one "choice" period a teacher had to shout above loud rock and roll music to be heard.

She said she felt many of these activities would be fine if they were conducted after school, rather than as a part of the regular school day.

Mrs. Richard Gayman agreed with her.

"I don't take lightly 4 percent of my child's time," Mrs. Gayman told the board. "It was really not a productive 4 percent."

She said her child had played with blocks in sand, played monopoly and had come home with a request to spend a morning at Dennis the Menace Park. She added that she was pleased that he had learned to play chess.

"I don't feel that all of these experiences are invalid," she said. "But perhaps some forethought and planning is important rather than letting them drift.

"It's difficult for people to come here," she continued. "I'm giving an unprofessional opinion, but I'm giving an honest opinion, and I feel it should be listened to, and 4 percent is not a minor percent in my view."

Mrs. Elinore Horne also expressed concern about permissiveness and lack of discipline in schools.

Board chairman Hilton Bialek said that any new program is apt to be a "little ragged" at first, but that teachers and administrators should be encouraged to try ideas they feel will be worthwhile.

He said there is a basic difference of approach between persons who feel education means sitting at a desk learning a specific lesson and those who believe that learning comes in a variety of ways, including interaction with other people.

Mrs. Oross said she agreed that children can learn in many ways, but that she did not feel the "choice" program was one of them.

Trustee Richard Wilsdon said he feels there is a danger in trying to evaluate an entire program on the basis of a single visit or the experience of a single student.

"You have to evaluate the total program, what was attempted, what was accomplished," he said. He said that he personally feels that 4 percent of a student's time directed towards decision-making, which was one aim of the STEP program, is not enough.

Gustafson concluded the discussion with high praise for his teaching staff.

"It takes a rare breed of professional to put themselves on the line ... when they are open to student selection," he said.

Faces serious charge for highway dealth of soldier

Mrs. Dorothy Luce of Los Robles Road, Carmel Valley, will be arraigned in Superior Court tomorrow morning on charges of felony hit-and-run driving involving the death of a Fort Ord soldier.

Mrs. Luce pleaded not guilty to the charge before Monterey Municipal Judge Russell Zaches Friday morning and waived her right to a preliminary hearing.

The charge stems from an accident last Thursday night, when Wayne B. Drayton, 20, of Sacramento, was killed, and his companion, Phillip A. Caltagerone, 18, of Rockford, Ill., seriously injured while walking along Highway 1 near Carmel Valley Road.

The California Highway Patrol said the two soldiers were walking along the southbound lane shoulder when they were struck by Mrs. Luce's automobile at about 9 p.m.

Officers said she left the scene of the accident, and then reported it two hours later in a phone call from her attorney's office.

Drayton was pronounced dead at the scene. Caltagerone was given first aid for a possible broken left leg and head and shoulder injuries, and then taken to Community Hospital by a Carmel Volunteer Fire Department ambulance. He was later transferred to the U.S. Army Hospital at Fort Ord, where he is in satisfactory condition.

Drayton was the 34th traffic fatality reported in Monterey County this year.

Opposition delays proposed enlargement of Carmel

BY PAT GRIFFITH

The Local Agency Formation Commission has delayed until June 23 any decision on annexing most of mid-Carmel Valley to the present Carmel Valley Fire Protection District.

After a spirited hearing last week, at which petitions for and against the annexation proposal were presented, the County Commission decided to postpone action in order to get a clearer expression of opinion from property owners in the affected area.

Appearing on behalf of annexation was John Pomeroy, vice president of the Rancho Tierra Grande Property Owners Association.

Pomeroy presented a petition signed by 43 persons, along with a map of the proposed annexation area, which would extend roughly from Rancho Fiesta Road on the east through Rancho Canada on the west.

Pomeroy said that those requesting annexation were concerned about saving lives and property in the mid-Valley area. He argued that if this area is annexed to the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District and has its own sub-station, fire insurance rates would drop as much as 24 cents per $100 actual value.

Taking an opposite view was Beverly Stover, a member of the Lower Valley Advisory Committee and the Mid-Valley Property Owners Association.

He offered a petition representing 208 landowners in mid- and lower Carmel Valley who oppose annexation because it would mean a tax increase of 70 cents per $100 assessed valuation for the improved service.

Stover complained that the annexation proposal had been given inadequate publicity, and said that he had personally contacted 100 "prominent" lower Valley residents and had found only one who had any knowledge of the proposal.

Annexation supporters challenged Stover's petition, claiming that several individuals who signed it lived outside the area under consideration.

In going over the petition the following morning, a member of the commission staff noted that William Wellam had signed on behalf of the 85 members of the Carmel Association of SportsmenInc., but that the property the group owns on Robinson Canyon Road is definitely not part of the posposed annexation area. He said he counted 129 actual signatures on the petition opposing annexation.

Stover later explained that it is quite possible some people living outside the area signed the petition because he did not have an advance copy of the map that Pomeroy presented to the commission.

MAPS INADEQUATE

"I know that some of them do not live within the most recent map area that was shown," he said. "We never had a map to go by,and the maps that have been presented have been very inadequate."

Stover said he plans to get a map from the County Assessor's office and color in blue the property of all persons who have signed his petition. He will have this marked map at the next hearing on June 23 and compare it against the precise metes and bounds of the proposed annexation area.

Stover feels this is the wrong time to suggest anything that would result in higher property taxes.

"We were not consulted in any way about this," he said. "That's what bothers people in the Lower Valley. This whole thing doesn't appear to be honest and above board."

He again suggested that sometime in the future Fire District 43 might build its own fire house near the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, and that if this were to happen, lower Valley residents living with a five-mile radius of the station could apply for annexation to that district.

Col. St. E.P. Tyner, chairman of the advisory board for Fire District 43, has previously told the Outlook that there is no possibility that district might expand in the future to include the mid-Valley area. He has said that property owners in the panhandle area between Hacienda Carmel and Del Mesa Carmel could apply to join the district if they wished, but that the district has a firm eastern boundary at Via Petra and has no intention of taking in a larger area.

Also speaking at last week's hearing in opposition to the annexation proposal was Milton Frumkin of Saddle Mountain Ranch, who said he was "well served" by the State Forestry Service station at Carmel Hill.

The Mid-Carmel Valley Area... A Comparisc

What Exists Now...

This is the fire protection that now exists for Carmel Valley west of Rancho Fiesta Road, but excluding Hacienda Carmel and Del Mesa Carmel, which are part of Fire District 43:

LOCATION OF FIRE STATION: Carmel Hill, next to Community Hospital. Sample distances: 7.4 miles to Carmel School, 8.5 miles to intersection of Tierra Grande Drive and Carmel Valley Road. Fast driving time in non-rush hour traffic -- 10 to 12 minutes.

EQUIPMENT: During rainy season, one 250 or 500 gallon pump truck. During peak fire seaston (starting May 1 this year) two similar pump trucks. There is also a truck on duty during the fire season at the Tularcitos sub-station operated by the State Division of Forestry 2 miles east of Carmel Valley Village.

MANPOWER: During rainy season, Fire Captain Don Tiller and an administrative man. During peak fire season, one trained forest service fireman for each truck at all times, plus seasonal firefighters hired from colleges or unemployment rolls. By the end of this month, at least four seasonal employees will be on duty at both the Carmel Hill station and the Tularcitos sub-station.

AREA COVERED: All unincorporated land in Monterey County, excluding Pebble Beach, Hacienda Carmel, Del Mesa Carmel and other sections included in Fire District 43. Has responsibility for all brush and timber fires even if they occur within another fire district. May also be called upon to send men or equipment to fight forest fires outside Monterey County. In that event, a crew is sent from Coralitos or Gonzales for stand-by duty at the Carmel Hill station.

TRAINING: Captain Tiller and key personnel highly qualified forestry firefighters. Seasonal employees receive 80 hours of on-the-job training during the regular work day, with emphasis on fighting brush and timber fires. All regular Division of Forestry personnel have passed the standard Red Cross first aid course. There is not time for seasonal employees to take this course, but some may have taken it previously.

AMBULANCE: No ambulance at the station. Ambulance service for this part of the Valley comes from Monterey.

TAX RATE: No specific tax levied on Valley property owners for fire protection -- it is included in the over-all county property tax rate.

INSURANCE: Most homeowners outside the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District pay the highest premiums (rating 10, or "unprotected") set by the Pacific Coast Fire Rating Association. However, there are property owners in the mid and lower Valley who are paying a lower rate because of hydrants located in their area. The actual cost of coverage varies with the type of insurance carried, but it generally runs around 40 cents per $100 of actual value.

What Could Exist...

Those who want to annex much of mid-Carmel Valley to the present Carmel Valley Fire District say this is what they foresee in terms of future fire protection:

LOCATION OF FIRE STATION: A Carmel Valley Fire Department sub-station would be located somewhere in mid-Valley probably in the area between the Valley Hills Shopping Center and Schulte Road. It would need about one acre.

EQUIPMENT: A 1250 gallon pumper truck and a smaller unit to begin with. For back-up assistance it would have the four pieces of fire-fighting equipment at the main station in the Village.

MANPOWER: At least one full-time professional in charge of the station. A year-round volunteer crew would be recruited from men living in the area.

AREA COVERED: Property outlined on the accompanying map. In case of a brush or timber fire, the Carmel Valley Fire Department would respond first, but then turn fire-fighting duties over to State when the Forestry Service truck arrived, leaving the local equipment available for structure fires.

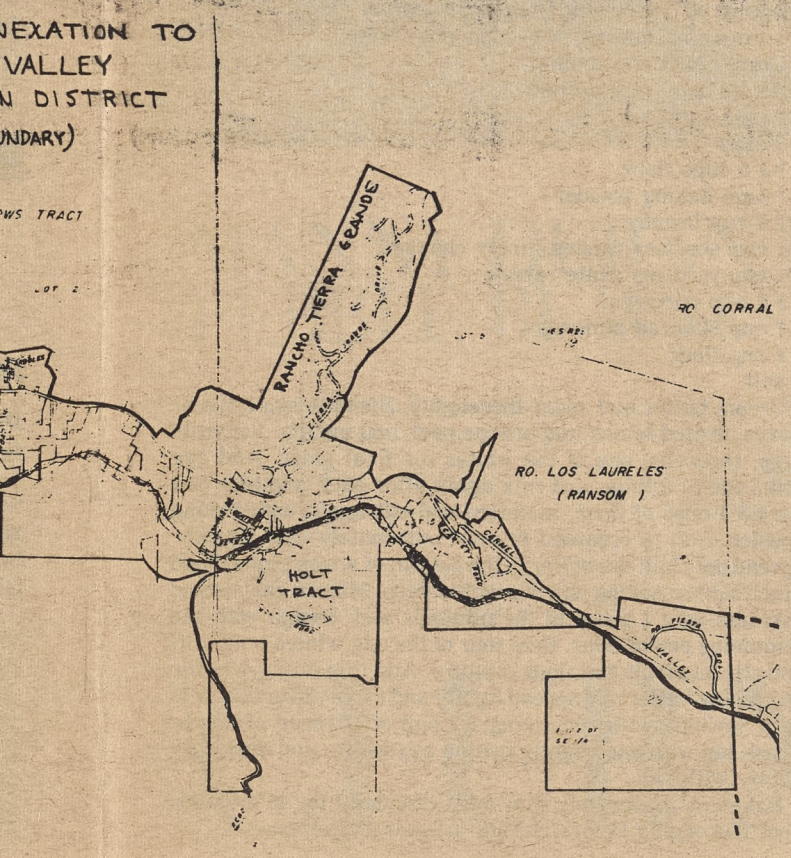
TRAINING: Volunteer crew would be trained by Captain Don Laird, who has trained the 25-man crew in the Village. Basic training takes about six months, with a minimum of six hours a month, plus additional training exercises on Saturday afternoons. About 75 percent of Laird's training is for house and structural fires, and 25 percent for brush or grass fires. Volunteers would be required to take the basic Red Cross first aid course and encouraged to take advanced courses.

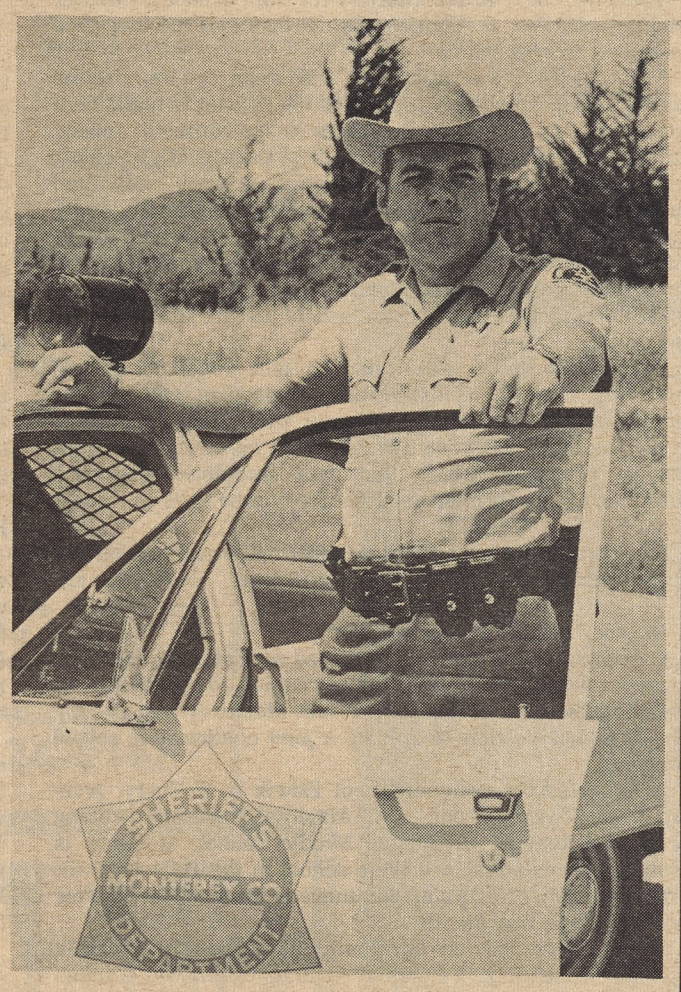
AMBULANCE: Good possibility that if a skilled crew is available, the Red Cross will supply an ambulance to cover this area. The Red Cross ambulance in the Village and a specially-equipped pick-up truck, which serves as a rescue ambulance, would also be available if needed.

TAX RATE: 70 cents per $100 assessed value, which is the same rate as is now paid within the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District. Morden Buck, secretary of the fire district, estimates this would cover $250,000 in capital expenditures, including the new fire house in the Village as well as one in mid-Valley, new fire engines, etc.

INSURANCE: With the installation of fire hydrants throughout the district, property owners living within five miles of the sub-station would qualify for a Class 6 rating of about 16 cents per $100 actual value.

VALUE OF LAND IN PROPOSED ANNEXATION AREA: $12,000,000. Assessed value of present fire district is $11,000,000.





SHERIFF'S DEPUTY Richard L. Helton is one of several deputies currently patroling Carmel Valley. Helton, who received his police training in Houston, Texas, has been with the Monterey County Sheriff's Department for four years. Deputies rotate assignments throughout Monterey County. When assigned to the Valley, they patrol from Carmel Rancho Shopping Center up through the Village. At least one sheriff's car, and often two or three, are located in the Valley 24 hours a day.

PRECISE ZONING ORDINANCE IS RECOMMENDED FOR JAMESBURG AREA

The Monterey County Planning Commission has voted 6 to 3 to apply precise zoning to all the Jamesburg area, including the 2,000 acres belonging to Bill Lambert which had been excluded from the interim zoning ordinance.

If the County Board of Supervisors approved the final zoning, all of the region will be classified for agricultural uses. Most of the area will have a 40 acre minimum building site. However, approximately 2,500 acres adjoining the Cachagua, which bounds Jamesburg on the west, would be zoned for five acre building sites. This includes the Lambert ranch.

Supporting Lambert's request to be excluded from the zoning ordinance were commissioners Edward P. Marcucci of Carmel Valley, Nora Hare of Marina and Vaughn Parsons of Salinas.

Lambert had explained that he opposed the zoning not because he wants to develop his land, but because he doesn't like government controls.

"I worked all my life and paid for it," he said, "and I don't go around bothering other people ... It won't be long before I'll need a pass to come to town."

The Board of Supervisors will hold a public hearing before taking final action.

Local fire department busy

The Carmel Valley Fire Department extinguished two small grass fires last week. The first occurred Wednesday afternoon at the residence of Barbara Gottschoalk on Valle Vista, burning about 30 square feet. Fire Chief Chip Collins said it was started when hot ashes were dumped on the grass.

The second fire was at 7:27 p.m. Saturday behind the Grapevine in Carmel Valley Village. Possibly started by a tossed cigarette, it burned about 80 square feet before it was put out.

The Red Cross ambulance operated by the Carmel Valley Fire Department responded to two automobile accidents in the Valley Thursday.

Jack D. Williams of 874 San Simeon Dr., Salinas, was taken to Community Hospital after he suffered minor injuries when his car swerved off Carmel Valley Road near Rancho Fiesta.

Williams told California Highway Patrol officers that he swerved to avoid hitting a semi-trailer dump truck driven by Floyd V. Hicks of Patterson, which had crossed over the center dividing line after making a right-hand turn onto Carmel Valley Road.

At 7:31 p.m. Thursday the fire department responded to a first aid call on Carmel Valley Road near the Tularcitos fire station. John McDougall of San Francisco had received minor injuries when he failed to negotiate a curve while driving east on Carmel Valley Road and rolled down an embankment. He was taken to Community Hospital in the Red Cross ambulance.

On Saturday, the fire department's Red Cross ambulance took Floyd Willis of Hitchcock Canyon to Community Hospital after a horse rolled over him at Hilltop Ranch.

Adopt Class Schedule for Carmel Adult School

The Carmel Adult School will offer the following subjects during its summer session from June 22 through July 31:

Art, English as a second language, pottery, sewing, writing for publication, and adult band.

There will be a $5 fee charged for high school graduates and persons over 21. Classes will not be started if there are less than 15 registrants.

This program was approved last week by the Carmel school board, which also authorized the district to make final arrangements for summer classes in instrumental music, driver training and computer math at Carmel High School, and classes in reading, mathematics, science, individual projects and music at Tularcitos and River schools.

The computer math course was a last-minute addition at the high school. Cintra Inc., a subsidiary of Physics International Company of Mountain View, will pay the salaries of two math teachers as part of a field test for the computer program.

The school board also voted to give teachers an opportunity, as was done last summer, to develop materials for individualized instruction at special curriculum workshops.

As was done last year, teachers will be asked to submit project proposals which they will complete under the direction of their principals either from June 15-26 or August 17-28.

Fifty project proposals will be approved, and teachers will receive $250 for the 10-day work schedule.

OTHER MATTERS

In other action, the school board:

1. Authorized the district to proceed with plans to establish its own continuation high school as required by State law. In the past, the district has joined with Monterey and Pacific Grove school districts to operate a joint continuation school program.

2. Accepted the resignations of Edwin L McCurry, principal of River School, and Marilyn Nettleship, home economics teacher at Carmel Middle School. McCurry is resigning to establish a private school in the Palo Colorado area, while Miss Nettleship will move to Massachusetts after her marriage this month.

3. Hired Mrs. Suzanne McGuane, a graduate of Alvernia College in Reading, Pa., as a reading teacher at Carmel Middle School. She will be a one-year replacement for Jo Brazell, who is taking a sabbatical leave of absence for the school year 1970-71.

4. Heard a report from Miss Brazell and several of her Streamlined Reading students who attended the recent International Reading Association Conference in Anaheim.

5. Authorized purchase of a reserve school bus for approximately $2600.

BY MRS. B.C. FORRESTER

"At an early age, Saint Dolly showed the sweetness of her nature by her tender love for her widowed father: a baker, dwelling at Pie Corner, with a large family of little children. It chanced that, with bad harvests, bread became so dear that of course, bakers were ruined by high prices. The miller fell upon Dolly's father, and swept the bake shop with his golden thumb. Not a bed was left for the baker or his little ones. Saint Dolly slept upon a flour sack, having prayed that good angels would help her to help her poor father. Now, sleeping, she dreamt that the oven was lighted, and she felt falling in a shower about her raisins, currants, almonds, lemon peel, flour, with heavy drops of brandy.

Then in her dreams she saw the fairies gather up the things that fell, and knead them into a cake. They put the cake into the oven and, dancing round and round, the fairies vanished, crying, 'Draw the cake, Dolly; Dolly, draw the cake.' And Dolly awoke and drew the cake; and, behold, it was the first Twelfth Cake, sugared at the top, and bearing the images of Faith, Hope and Charity.

Now this cake, shown in the window, came to the King's ear; and the King bought the cake, knighted the baker, and married Dolly to his grand falconer, to whom she proved a faithful and loving wife, bearing him a baker's dozen of lovely children." (From Douglas Jerrold's Fireside Saints, 1857.) By an easy transition we come to the discussion of bread and bakers.

If, in the years prior to the year 700 A.D., you had gone into a bake shop in England, and asked for "a loaf of bread," the baker would have questioned your sanity. In that period the word "loaf" meant bread, and the word "bread" meant a fragment, or a broken piece. So he would have understood you to say you wanted "Bread of a few pieces," Bread of Fragments, and he would have wondered. In later centuries, "bread" attained its present meaning.

"Pantry" from the Latin "Panis" was originally the place for storing bread, and as late as the year 1649 was merely the closet where the bread was kept. Later of course the pantry became the storage space for anything, even crockery, which was brought to or removed from the table. The butler's pantry of today originated in the cellar of the house, where wines and other alcoholic beverages were stored under the supervision of the "Boteler" or servant in charge of the "botels," carrying them to and from the table. The botels have become bottles in modern English and the boteler is now the butler, in households which maintain a wine cellar. But his duties still include the care and serving of beverages, the mixing of cocktails, etc. He also supplies the cook with wines used in cooking.

Before we get to recipes may I quote another Fireside Saint? This time, Saint Becky:

"A very goodman was Saint Becky's husband, but with his heart a little too much in his bottle. Port wine—red port wine—was his constant cry was "bee'swing." Now as he sat tipsy in his arbour, a wasp dropt into his glass, and the wasp was swalloed, stinging the man inwardly. Doctors crowded, and with much ado the man was saved.

Now Saint Becky nursed her husband tenderly to health, and upbraided him not. But she said these words and they reformed him: "My dear, take wine, and bless your heart with it: but wine in moderation. Else never forget that the bee's-wing of today becomes the wasp's sting of tomorrow."

Here is recipe for "English Tea Cake" often used in holiday seasons such as Christmas or Twelfthnight:

1 cup (2 cubes) butter
1 cup sugar
5 drops oil of cinnamon or powdered 1-1 2 tspn.
2 drops oil of cloves or 1 4 tspn. powdered
3 drops oil of nutmeg or 1 4 tspn. powdered
Grated peel of lemon (1)
Grated peel of 1 orange
1 tspn vanilla
5 eggs
1-3 4 cups flour
1 tspn baking powder
1 4 cup brandy
1 cup seedless raisins, finely chopped
1 cup seedless white raisins
1 2 cup currants
1 cup slivered almonds
1 cup flour
Salt

Cream butter and sugar thoroughly. Blend in spice oils or spices, grated lemon and orange peel, and vanilla. Separate eggs, reserving one of the whites for final glaze. Add egg yolks one at a time, and mix again after each addition. Sift the 1-3 4 cups of flour, measure and sift again with baking powder. Add to creamed mixture alternately with brandy. Spread only half the batter in the bottom of a wax paper-lined 8 inch square baking pan two inches deep. Mix the raisins and currants with 1 2 cup of the almonds and dredge with the remaining cup of flour. Beat four of the egg whites until stiff and stir into fruit and flour mixture. Add this mixture to the remaining batter and spread lightly and evenly over batter in pan. Sprinkle with remaining 1 2 cup of slivered almonds. Brush top with one slightly beaten egg white, and dust very lightly with salt.

Bake in a moderately slow oven (325 deg.) for 45 minutes. Cool thoroughly before cutting into serving sizes.

Area Drug Treatment Center a possibility?

Carmel school board trustees Richard Wilsdon and James Miller were appointed as representatives of the school district last week to work with other Monterey County officials to establish a drug counseling and treatment center.

The board authorized Supt. of Schools Harris Taylor to write letters to the City of Carmel, Monterey County and the County Board of Education, asking that they appoint representatives to meet with Wilsdon and Miller to discuss a possible joint-powers agreement.

Carmel attorney William Burleigh, a member of the board's Drug Misuse Committee, suggested that a joint powers agreement would be a logical way to establish a drug center and spread the cost equitably among the various local governmental jurisdictions that are directly involved with the problems of drug abuse. A similar arrangement has recently been adopted in Salinas.

If a counseling and treatment facility is established, John Frykman, the district's community counselor, would presumably have a leading role in its operation.

The board agreed that no firm committment to any sort of joint powers agreement could be made until Frykman had an opportunity to study the local situation in greater depth and make his own recommendations.

THE TOWN CRIER

THE COUNTY PLANNING COMMISSION has decided to let the Carmel Unified School District go ahead with plans to build a bus garage and maintenance yard behind Middle School even if it violates zoning in the area. The school district had notified the County Board of Supervisors that it planned to exercise its legal right to declare the existing zoning ordinance inapplicable. The district has said the bus compound will be built and landscaped in such a way that it will blend in with the surrounding area. It was the consensus of the Commission that it would take no action against the school district for this decision.

BY JUDITH EISNER

The Memorial Day weekend and two spells of nice warm weather all indicate that summer is on its way. During the months to come, your dog will require a little extra attention to ensure his enjoyment of the "long, hot summer."

Nature intended for dogs to carry a coat of hair the year 'round. Only our selective -- and often foolish -- breeding policies have produced dogs with extremes of coats. Such as the Poodle. In earlier, simpler times, Nature created dogs with coats that well-suited to the climate in which the dog lived. Thus, the herding dogs, who had to be able to tolerate winter snow and sleet as well as summer sun while tending their master's flocks, developed a coat that was both warm and water-repellent and which also provided insulation against the worst of the sun's rays in warmer weather.

Unless yours is a dog which is regularly clipped all through the year, the biggest mistake you can make is having your dog clipped or shaved to "cool him off" for the summer. Long-haired dogs, when shaved, are stripped of their natural insulation and protection. As a result, they are far more susceptible to sunstroke and to all the parasites that tend to make the summer months a misery for dogs.

Shorn of their coats, dogs can literally sunburn, especially since their skin is fairly tender and unused to the elements. An added cruelty to the shaven dog is the definite psychological torment his "naked" condition creates. Perfectly happy, well-adjusted pets have become psychological wrecks after a well-intentioned bout with the clipper. They begin to hide behind the furniture, slink, cringe and, in general, act mortified at their ludicruous appearance. It may sound a little far-fetched, but studies document it and we have seen one of the sled dog breeds, a lovely, outgoing dog all year, turn into a mean-tempered, tail-between-the-legs cur after his misguided mistress shaved him.

All the little pests that are tolerable in the winter months seem to become magnified with the hot days of summer. Suddenly the woods and fields seem to abound with ticks who are just waiting to latch onto your poor dog. It may interest you to know that ticks are attracted to perspiration; they may lie in wait for years until the perspiration of animal or human triggers a response to drop off their perch and bite. Certain varieties of tick are more dangerous than others as they spread Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever. There were more than the normal number of such cases last year, so it pays to be especially vigilant this year.

Every dog who spends any time outdoors, be it in your safe backyard or in the field, should be checked each evening for ticks. Pay special attention to shorter-furred area behind and in the ears as ticks find these easier hunting grounds. To remove a tick, saturate it with alcohol or acetone (nail polish remover). It may take quite a soaking before it releases its hold. The solvent should be squeezed directly onto the tick from a cotton ball. Avoid handling the tick; use tweezers.Never forcefully pull them out, for the head breaks off and remains imbedded in the dog's flesh where it may cause an infection. Once the tick is loosened, pluck it off and either burn it or flush it away.

Flea collars, if renewed every three months, will kill ticks. However, it takes as long as a week to do this. We would rather not have our dog running around with ticks on him while we lazily wait for the flea collar to do its work. The sooner the pest is eliminated, the better.

With fleas, however, the collars work quickly and efficiently. During the summer, they are a blessing to the dog and cat owner. But certain precautions are necessary. If your dog goes swimming or gets hosed off now and then, the collar must be removed as long as the dog is wet. Water speeds the release of the insecticide they contain and the increased dose may have ill effects on the dog. With cats, there is always the danger of strangulation if the animal climbs trees or fences -- as cats will. So you must decide whether a flea spray or powder isn't perhaps a safer solution to the flea problem on your cat.

A once-a-week spraying of your pet's sleeping area will get rid of any uninvited guests that have dropped off his coat while he sleeps, and will prevent re-infestation.

Water is so vital to all life that we tend to take it for granted. Dogs and cats must have water to live. People still believe that cats who are fed milk don't need water; they do. And you can be sure that they're getting it somewhere if you aren't providing it.

During the summer, access to a constant supply of cool, fresh water is essential. It isn't good enough to fill a tin pan one day and leave it, standing, until it evaporates. Water kept outdoors should be placed in the shade and refilled at least once during the day. At night, the water pan should be taken inside, scrubbed and dried for use the next day. Indoor water pans should be cleaned at least once daily and refilled whenever necessary.

Your pet will need more water during the hot weather, but he may refuse to drink dirty or sun-warmed water. Insects in the water certainly do him no good, either. An inexpensive crockery bowl will keep the water cooler than a metal container. An auto-matic self-watering device like the Lix-it, that attaches directly to an outdoor faucet is a wonderful idea and your dog will quickly learn how to use it. It guarantees fresh, clean water all the time.

Grooming is especially important during the summer months because your pet is naturally shedding his coat. Not only with a daily brushing cut down on the loose hairs on everything, but it will make the dog more comfortable. It will also give you a chance to check his skin for "hot spots" or summer exzema, a rash-like fungal infection that plagues thousands of dogs in the hot weather. Prompt attention, including soothing lotions and itch-preventing medication prescribed by the veterinarian will check this problem before it spreads and destroys the dog's coat.

More about hot weather problems next week ...

TO HOLD OPEN HOUSE THIS WEEK AT CARMEL VALLEY NURSERY SCHOOL

The Carmel Valley Parent Nursery School is holding a pre-enrollment open house on Thursday and Friday from 9:30 to 11:00 a.m.

The school is run as an on-going adult education project under the auspices of the Carmel Unified School District's Adult Education Program. Headed by a fully-certified director, the school is organized as a co-operative and every mother "works" one morning a week and must attend one weekly evening meeting. The aims of the school, in addition to providing a creative playing and learning opportunity for pre-schoolers, is to further parents' understanding of their children, themselves and their relationship as individuals and part of a family.

School is held at the Carmel Valley Community Chapel on Paso Hondo where there are complete facilities including equipment for indoor games, painting and art projects as well as an outdoor area for safe, supervised climbing, swinging, sandbox projects and motor-skill activities such as bike riding. The children enjoy a milk, cookie & story time daily. A special teacher visits twice a week to teach music and creative dramatics. Field trips and picnics to places of interest are included in the program.

School hours are 9:00 to 11:30 Monday through Friday and children from 3 years to kindergarten age are welcome. A minimal monthly tuition of $12.00 is charged.

All interested parents of pre-schoolers are cordially invited to the Open House to observe the activities and obtain further information. Questions may be directed to Mrs. Eisner at 624-2936.

Continental Championships for Formula A cars at Laguna Seca

Classic Grand Prix type road racing comes to Laguna Seca raceway June 13-14 in the form of the 1970 running of the Continental Championships.

The $25,000 auto racing spectacular is for sleek one-seat, open wheel Formula A cars, similar to the Formula I machines that tour the world championship circuit. An example of that form of competition was recently seen by the American public live from Monaco on the Wide World of Sports.

Formula A cars normally are powered by larger engines than the Formula I machines and boast specific chassis regulations. The Continental Championships are considered the closest form of auto racing to world championship competition that can be seen on the West Coast.

The popularity of this form of racing was emphasized last May at Monterey when more than 24,000 spectators saw Sam Posey sweep to a victory in the Laguna Seca event.

This year's championship tour will travel to 12 cities in the U.S. and Canada with close to $400,000 in purse and prize money distributed.

Drivers representing most of the European racing powers plus a large contingent of top American wheelers will make the national tour. The machines come from the glamor factories overseas with such makes as McLaren, Lola, Lotus, Brabham, Surtees and Cooper set for the show, American race car makers will be represented by the Eagle car manufactured under the direction of Dan Gurney.

For the first time this season, the Saturday card at Monterey will offer a full schedule of regional sports car events featuring more than 200 drivers from the Western United States.

Dyer and Schroeder retire from All Saints School board

Peter Dyer and George Schroeder of Carmel retired from the board of All Saints' Episcopal Day School this month, after 11 and 8 years of service, respectively.

Mr. Dyer was chairman of a study group formed in 1959 to investigate the needs and opportunities for an Episcopal elementary school on the Monterey Peninsula.

When the school was founded in 1961, he was elected Chairman of the Board, and has served on the board continuously since then.

The Rev. Jefferson Stephens, Dean of Students at the Robert Louis Stevenson School, has been elected to succeed Mrs. Dyer as chairman.

Mr. Schroeder, a Carmel attorney, was instrumental in obtaining the present site for All Saints' Day School in Carmel Valley. He will continue to serve on the school's Building and Fund Drive Committees.

All Saints' presently has a student body of 105 boys and girls in kindergarten through grade seven. An eighth grade will be added during the 1970-71 school year.

Construction of a $60,000 addition to the existing Day School structure is now going on, and will be completed in time for the opening of school in September.
